By Bob Hagerty memunonal Herald Tribi .ONDON — Central banks can p smooth out the short-term iks in the foreign exchange mar-an international panel consmooth out the short-term ded in a report released Friday. But, the panel said, central bank ervention is no substitute for tting a country's economic house order over the longer term. The study was prepared by a nel of economic officials from ance, West Germany, Italy, Cana. Japan. Britain and the United ates. The leaders of those counes ordered the study at their ecoomic meeting last June in Verilles, where they were unable to tree on the subject.

Finance ministers from the seven meeting in Washington on Friday. They were preparing the way for this year's economic summit, in Williamsburg, Virginia, from May 28 to May 30. In a statement late Friday, the ministers said that greater exchange-rate stability is a major objective. They also said that countries should pay close attention to the international implications of their domestic economic policies.

European economic officials have complained that the buge U.S. budget deficit has hur their countries by keeping the dollar artificial to be the countries by the property of the countries by the c tificially high.

The report comes amid increas-ing official fuss over gyrations in exchange rates. The dollar, for instance, declined fitfully by around 10 percent from March 1977 to July 1980 against other leading cur-rencies. Since then, it has gained nearly 25 percent, despite numer-ous short setbacks.

The sharp fluctuations make in-ternational trade riskier and discourage overseas investment. For oil-importing nations, the doilar's strength over the past three years has been particularly painful because oil is priced in dollars.

Major industrial countries gener-ally agree that they should find ways to align their economic poli-cies more closely to reduce cur-rency swings. The question is whether central banks can help matters by entering the market to buy or sell currencies in an attempt to influence the market.

The panel concloded that such intervention has proved "an effective tool in the pursuit of certain exchange rate objectives - notably those oriented toward influencing the behavior of the exchange rate in the short run." In the longer run. however, such "fundamentals" as inflation rates and trade balances largely determine exchange rates. the report said.

it noted that markets tend to overreact to changes in economic or political situations. At times, the report said, central banks have been able to use intervention to "buy time" for the market to reassess its views or for new economic nolicies to take hold.

The report is well enough hedged to accommodate the views of all security-related East-West trade participants. On Reagan's Speech Not the Best Policy speech nailed down the essential point that the region matters and that the way the United States deals with events in its backyard will be taken in many other places as a measure of its constancy and steadiness. He did not prove beyond a reasonable doubt that his particular combination of policies is the one best calculated to serve U.S. interests.

Mr. Reagan suggested that the choice lies between his course and an opposition that "counsels passivity, resignation, defeatism
... while the people of Central America are delivered to totalitarianism and we ourselves are left vulnerable to new dangers." But this is not fair. Most of Mr. Reagan's critics accept his judgment of the high stakes. They want no more Nicaraguas and no more Soviet advances. On those goals there is agreement. What is questioned is the way of reaching them. The main congressional critics note, as Senator Dodd suggested, that although Congress has ended up giving Mr. Reagan negotiating space and all the aid he has sought in the last 2% years, things seem to be going from bad to worse. Why? they ask, And what reason is there to think that more of the same will work?

Mr. Reagan's focus is on the Nicaraguan-Cuban-Soviet role, and with good reason. Central America, with its poverty and injustice, had long been simmering; what brought it to a revolutionary boil in the last few years bas been outside stimulus and support. Yet the form of the Reagan administration's engagement in the region, its attempt to counter that intervention, has built-in problems of its own. It ignites old anxieues about the U.S. role, and magnifies some of the very factors - the U.S. presence, the fett tradition of U.S. interventionism that lie at the heart of the political ferment.

In El Salvador, a reaction to the intrusiveness that is the companion and the price of U.S. aid is building among the very groups that U.S. policy seeks to rescue. In Nicaragua, U.S. support of insurgents allows a nasty totalitarian minded Marxist regime to dull the otherwise telling indictment that it is a foreign tool.

In brief, just as the United States cannot walk away from Central America, because the region is too important, so it cannot take charge and dictate a solution, because of the immense weight of its past involvement, which Latins remember keenly. That leaves the Reagan administration with a requirement to conduct a continuing policy, but a limited one.

The war is crushing El Salvador; taking an immense burnan toll, draining the economy, lowering the level of health and services, and so on. It is not just that the government lacks the aid to best the guerrillas; if that were the case, more aid would be the answer. It is that, reform and electoral democracy and even in human rights, the government, and especially the still largely self-ruled army, may not be up to the tremendous job of modernizing the country and fighting a war at the same time. To avert the possibility of eventual collapse.

meaning a guerrilla victory. El Salvador needs the best political solution it can get. That is the result being sought by the friendly and frantic democratic states of the Contadora group — Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Panama.

Perhaps these Latins are wrong in believing that the Marxist guerrilla influence can be contained better in the negotiating context that they are trying to promote. Perhaps each is too heholden to its domestic lef! to judge honestly the aggressive revolutionary thrust that is some irreducible part of the guerrilla movements that rule Nicaragua and ravage El Salvador. Successful precedents for the approach they commend are few and far between. But no U.S. policy that swims against the Latin current will get very far. And as high as the stakes are for the get very far. And as high as the states are to United States, they are higher for the Latins, whose self-interest is to slow down the Marxist revolutionary train before it reaches them. These considerations find expression, we think, in three policy goals:

1) Congress should vote the president the El Salvador aid money he seeks. There is a war on, and the government side deserves support, especially if it moves toward negotiations.

2) At the same time, the administration should walk through the negotiating door the Contadora group is straining to open for it. Passive "support" of this initiative is inadequate. If the initiative is not actively encouraged it will be overwhelmed by the sheer weight and pervasiveness of U.S. policy.

Meanwhile, the Reagan administration must find a way to disengage from its support of insurgents bent on overthrowing the Sandinist regime in Nicaragua. The necessary mission of interdicting arms from Nicaragua should be confined to methods that do not refurbish the old, politically crippling image of the United States as an interventionist power.

Would such a policy of generous aid to El Salvador, diplomatic cooperation with Latin friends and non-intervention in Nicaragua work? There is uncertainty and risk aplenty in it, but less, we believe, than in the president's current policy of generous aid, its own diplomatie preferences and intervention in Nicaragua. The current course has the further disadvantage of being demonstrably unable to gain the bipartisan, executive-congressional consensus that is the only conceivable basis for a policy with a fair chance for success.

Central America: The Opinion Factor

By William Pfaff

PARIS — The argument rages in Washington as to whether Cen-tral America is as President Ronald Reagan and the teaders of his administration describe it. Is Nicaragua effectively the outpost of Soviet aggression? Is it plausible to think El Salvador an emergent democracy? Those, however, are not the relevant questions for Washington, important as they may be to luckless Central Americans. Congress and the administration act as if it would make a difference to American policy if they could agree on a description of what is going on in Central Ameri-ca. But, first of all, they will not get an agreement. And second, it would make little difference if they could.

The determining force in what the United States will and will not do in Central America is public opinion in the United States. Every serious evi-dence says that the American public,

WASHINGTON — The title of is. the commission that was cre inta ated in 1981 and has just issued it less findings is itself heartening. The Nagiristicual Commission on Excellence idal-Education. Its subject was excellenement not equality or some other facet th a social justice peripheral to the punice. poses of education. One measure de of recent confusions is that it seems a; are most bold to extol the pursuit of exried cellence, and to do so without worr, and ing about "elitism" or the imposition of "repressive" standards that will ige to hibit the free flow of self-expressions to

Noting that "history is not kind thusidlers," the commission says that thereUnited States has "lost sight of thise

This act was perhaps unthinking it the the sense that it was unreflective. But the
it was the result of ideas. it was the result of ideas.

One idea is that education is less tact matter of transmitting a cultural legic. acy than of instilling skills useful lings tomorrow's markets. Another idea stucthat education is less a matter of pugino dng something into students than ce of letting something — self-realization or whatever — out.

The commission rightly notes the link between a nation's educational excellence and commercial vigor. But the commission stresses that its commiscern "also includes the intellectual". cern "also includes the intellectualization moral and spiritual strengths of our people which knit together the very fabric of our society.... A high lever of shared education is essential to their fostering of a common culture, espe-7. cially in a country that prides itself? on pluralism and individual free-dom." A continental nation steeped in capitalist individualism must make provision for nurturing some collective consciousness. The four words on the seal of one of the first land-grant colleges (Michigan State) express the practicality of much of America's educational effort: "Agriculture and Applied Science." Such education accords with a premise of modern politics: A good society is one in which citizens' passions are absorbed in commerce. But the fact that American education has always aimed to serve commercial vigor has imposed on education a special duty. It is the duty to strengthen the social bonds that are weakened by the dynamism of a rest-less society of atomized individuals preoccupied with getting.

In their wonderful book "Shake-speare's Politics," Allan Blonta and Harry Jaffa say that today no books play the role that the Bible, Shakespeare and John Bunyan once played in the education of English-speaking peoples. No generally read works supply civilizing and unifying models of virtue. "MASH" and "Star Wars" will not suffice. The thinness of the stream of shaping culture is, in part, a result of the contemporary assumption that school curricula should be academic cafeterias catering to stu-

life is the little red schoolhouse, representing faith in education. There were public schools in Boston in 1635. In 1880 England had a population of 23 million and four degree-granting institutions; Ohio had a population of three million and 37 such institutions.

John Adams, the most dour of the Founding Fathers, expressed typical American optimism about one thing: The virtues and powers to which men may be trained by early education and constant discipline, are truly sublime and astounding." But Adams also said something that reveals wby education and equality are American values in tension: "Education makes a greater difference between man and man, than nature has between man and brute." If so, the more resources that are invested in education, the more stratified society may become. If education is going to create and widen disparities between citizens, it must take care to inculcate some commonality. Otherwise, links of shared values and understandings become dangerously attenuated.

Certainly we want lots of American engineers who can run rings around the competition in whatever high-tech tomorrow is coming at us. But even more, we need a citizenry acquainted with the ancient patrimony of our civilization. That patrimony is a renewable resource, but it will not regenerate spontaneously.

The Washington Post.

Nor Is This the Alamo

latest rendering of policy in Central America was its extraordinary definition of the stakes and its skimpy account of the realities. Mr. Reagan gave a dozen inflated reasons for defending the isthmus, yet said almost nothing about the practical problems involved or how be proposes to solve them.

If SI billion a year, even for a decade, can improve the lot of Central Americans and keep any more of their countries out of the Soviet bloc, we say by all means try it. But if that is what the president was triging, why not just say it? His underlying instinct may be reasonable. Overstating commitments while minimizing the costs is not.

Washington's political dilemma in Central America has been plain. With Cuba and probably Nicaragua lost to the Soviet bloc, any president will do his utmost to prevent the loss of another country. Yet after Vietnam, every Congress will fear pouring lives and billions into a new quagraire. Both the president and Congress respond to the same electorate; we are schizoid in these matters. What, then, is the obligation of leadership? To teach. To teach that Central America is neither the Sudetenland nor South Vietnam: neither the place to draw rigid lines against hig-power aggression nor the certain graveyard of good intentions; that our concern for who rules those backward nations arises naturally, from history and geography; that direct intrusions of Soviet power can be met directly. and by other means, but that Marxist-Lenunists who would serve Soviet purposes are nonetheless unwelcome and worth resisting. These are legitimate, important interests. They justify exertion. They do not justify open-ended communients. They argue for a patient, enduring effort, with goals and restraints accepted by both branches. Mr.

Reagan acknowledged this American reality only when he emphasized that no one is thinking of sending American combat troops.

But if the stakes are as he says, why on earth not? He began by defining them as the Pana-ma Canal and vital wartime shipping lanes, went on to talk of the "national security of all the Americas" and concluded with this sweepthere, we cannot expect to prevail elsewhere. Our credibility would collapse, our alliances would crumble, and the safety of our homeland would be put at jeopardy.

And what, teally, was the impulse for this extravagant rhetoric? If you believe Mr. Reagan's spokesmen, as we do, it was to spur Congress to add $50 million more in military aid for El Salvador and to enlarge America's corps of military advisers there from 55 to maybe 150. That stands Theodore Roosevelt on his head: speaking loudly, on behalf of a very small stick. Mr. Reagan would have been wiser to teach, like his ambassador in San Salvador, Deane Hinton. He argues for more aid in a very different tone. The chances for democracy and land reform and a civilized army are far from lost, he says; the deadlock between government and guerrillas can be slowly broken, but 'you're going to have to somehow keep de-mocracy and the economy going here for 10 years" and aim for a "generational change."

Such aims, if openly pursued and candidly monitored, would deserve support. It would give hope to Central Americans who depend on our staying power and discourage enemies who bet against it, It would pierce the arro-gance of reactionaries who long misgoverned Central America and now pine for the Marines. Above all, it would match affordable means to defensible ends.

Fewer Arms Detected Moving Into Salvador

By George C. Wilson

One is that rebel forces may be sending just as many weapons but move arms from Nicaragua to El Salvador, detouring around a trail that had been under close watch and which government forces had come close to sealing off.

Sotheby's Scores a Major Manuscript Success as Board Fights Takeover Bid

ONDON - Could Sotheby's L disintegrate? The question would have sounded like a joke only a month ago. Given the medieval manuscript sale of historic importance held at Sotheby's on Monday, it sounds paradoxical. Yet it has been implicitly raised by the board of directors of the Sotheby Parke Bernet Group in a document released on Tuesday.

Similar records are undoubtedly to be expected in other major sales scheduled at Sotheby's over the next few weeks — two extraordi-nary 16th-century suits of armor and three French Gothic ivories, all from Lord Astor's collection, formerly housed at Hever Castle; the Havemeyer collection of Im-pressionists; and last but not least, adruddin Aga Khan's collection of African art, the largest to come up on the market since the George Ortiz sale in 1979.

This may all look bright and sunny, but what matters, as far as an anction house's prosperity is concerned, is not record prices, but the profit with which it is left. If ndvertising is costly and the commission low, profits can be next to nil. According to a reliable source, Sotheby's defeated Christie's in the battle over the highly important Sadruddin Aga Khan collection of African art to be sold in London June 27 after very tough negotia-tions over sale terms — in other words after lowering its overall fee below that of Christie's. Much the same would appear to apply to the Havemeyer Impressionsis to be auctioned on May 18 in New York. Such sales yield prestige rather than income.

In that same sale, a Turkish rug called by Sotheby's carpet expert Jack Franses "a 16th-century Ushak carpet" was described by outside specialists as a hybrid made up from fragments of the field of what had once been a gorgeous 16th-century carpet, and a central rosette and corner quarter rosettes of the 19th-century. The stylistic inconsis tency is obvious and so are the wrong proportions of the layout. The department's estimate was £40,000, reflecting the vendor's wishes relayed by Sotheby's rather than its value, which might be put at one-tenth, if that. Luckily for all parties concerned, the wreck was

Other objects of miserable quality fetched huge prices, while splendid pieces went for hardly any money — not least of all two important Iranian pieces of pottery acquired by the Victoria and Albert Museum. Such examples give an ironical ring to Sotheby's board of directors' statement to the effect that "the recent promotion of important sales of Islamic art in London is directed at the market in the

If the current management stays, it is equally possible that Saidi, who, with Lord John Kerr, was one of the two architects of Sotheby's successful Middle Eastern manuscripts sales, would go too: he has been a harsh critic of Sotheby's managerial policy to-wards its staff during the current takeover crisis. The Sartre Diaries

By Marilyn August The Associated Pres

DARIS - More than 200,000 mourners flooded the streets for Jean-Paul Sartre's funeral here three years ago, so it is not surprising that two recent volumes of the philosopher's private notebooks are already on France's best-seller

Sartre once said "a writer must refuse to let himself be transformed into an institution." By that standard, he failed miserably, turning into the undisputed giant of 20th-century French literature. But "Les Carnets de la Drole de Guerre" (Notebooks from the Phoney War) and "Cahiers pour une morale" (Notebooks in Search of Morality), published by Gallimard in early April, paint a more intimate picture of Sartre.

French literary critics, for once in general agreement, have bailed the works for their fresh insight into the man who refused the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1964.

"Just as Picasso symbolizes painting, just as Marilyn [Monroe] symbolizes the movies, Jean-Paul Sartre embodies literature," Jean-Pierre Enard wrote in the Socialist daily Le Matin, which ran a series of articles on the previously impub-

ished material

"The notebooks begin where his other antobiographical works leave off. . . . Sartre knew that he was not meant to enjoy n life of plea-sure and happiness," wrote Claude Jannoud in the conservative daily Le Figaro. "He was an unrelenting moralist, and, contrary to common thought, he always knew exactly what he was talking about."

432 pages of first-person narrative are merely a prelude to the book to be published this fall: a 1,000-page volume of letters to his faithful companion of 40 years, Simone de

Beauvoir. The two met while philosophy students at the Ecole Normale Supérieure. Although they never married, and maintained separate apartments, theirs was a relationship that remained intact, despite a series of well-publicized love affairs. "We built our relationship on the basis of total sincerity and complete devotion to each other." Sartre wrote. "We sacrificed our petty moods and avoided anything that might have upset a love that was both permanent and directed."

In the notebooks, the first of which Sartre wrote at age 34 in 1939-40 while a prisoner of war, he describes himself as an incurable romantic, bopelessly drawn into love affairs doomed to fail.

In one vignette, Sartre describes a hospital visit to the ailing "Bea-ver" (his nickname for de Beanvoir). Although concerned for her welfare, he cannot help but think about an upcoming rendezvous with someone else.

Sartre describes himself as an uncontrollable gourmand. Placed on a strict diet for health reasons, he wrote that he would often sneak off to have his beloved but forbidden croissants and black expresso coffee before joining de Beauvoir for a second breakfast at La Coupole, their favorite Left Bank

Sartre once declared the private side of man was not meant to be seen, even posthumously, but critics say his unforgiving self-portrait is both touching and rare.

According to Arlette Sartre-Elkaim, Sartre's adopted daughter and editor of the manuscripts, the notebooks portray the life of an ordinary soldier in war-torn Fran; Sartre wrote nonstop during year in prison, despite a pair and steadily worsening eye cof tion that eventually led to ti

VIENNA — Diminished in pocket by his monumental venture into faience painong the Austrian National Tourist Board Surrealist artist Leberb is standing high in the bandsome Four Continent murals be bas painted for the foyer of the University of Vienna's new School of Economics complex. Eight meters fabout 26 feet by eight meters, the murals are made up of about 2,050 ceramic plates. each a little larger than a square foot. For this three-year project. Leberts spent 18 months living and working in Faenza — the city in north Italy that gave its name to the fine variety of highly colored ceramic he used — under conditions recalling those in which Michelangelo created the Sistine ceil-

Helmut Kart Ivan Leherbauer. born in Vienna 50 years ago, shortened and internationalized his name in 1959 to Leberb. In 1964. the Austrian Minister of Education vetoed a show of work he was preparing as as the Austrian entry for the 1964 Venice Biennale on the grounds that it was "pornographic aggressive and anarchistic," and Leberb packed up his wife and son and left for France, where his work entered fashionable collections (Fellini's in Rome; Saint Laurent's in Paris) and the right museums.

Critics praised the "musicality" of his art: the public was enchanted by his predilection for wearing gorgeous mustaches - with blue in the early 1970s, however, Ausbruan Schillings went for the project. In the early 1970s, however, Ausbruan Schillings went for wooden base of "Liberté, Egalité, on the junk heap of the consumer tria bean to woo back Lebeth."

tria began to woo back Leherb. "the businessman's surrealist." The "Asia." the first of the four mucommissioned him to paint a set of travel posters. "Four Signals from my Native Land," four striking blue watercolors that are now collector's items: the most famous a white-wigged boy riding a motorcy-cle — with headlight proclaiming in English, "I LIKE MOZART."

Then, in 1979, be was commissigned to do the project for the business and financial school that the University of Vienna was plan-ning behind the Franz Josefs-Bahnhof, "to integrate modern art into modern architecture."

Leherb proposed faience, which be had been experimenting with for a over 20 years, a medium customarily used for nothing larger than cups or vases. Finished faience is durable and resistant once it has been baked in ovens at 980 degrees centigrade (1796 degrees Fahrenheit), but it is perilously fragile and delicate in the making. "You paint only with powders," Leher's explained recently, "and you don't see the colors until they're in the oven. It's in the fire that light blue becomes red, gray becomes vellow. And I was sometimes putting three or four or five colors one on top of another. It is a little like alchemy. I created seven new colors that never existed before in faience.

While you're working with these powders, if you touch them with a finger you destroy every-thing. You have to keep all win-dows and doors closed — even in the summer of 1982 in Faenza. when it got to 40 degrees [centigrade] outdoors and 10 degrees warmer inside my atelier. In the winter, I had on heating and worked at zero degrees. By trial and error, it took more than 3,000 plates to make the final 2050.

In Faenza, he started out with skilled assistants but soon learned their jobs. "They couldn't find their way to my work, so I did it myself. First, when all your life you think small — in terms of cups and saucers - it is very hard suddenly to think big. The other problem was workmanship. They kept say ing: 'It's eight meters high. Nobody can see how we've done it, so why not take the easiest way at the top? And I had to explain to them that the Sistine ceiling is 12 meters high but Michelangelo painted it won derfully and perfectly, anyway for nothing, because nobody can see it." As it turned out, in Vienna the walls stand two stories high and his work can be viewed at the top from balconies.

His atelier was the stage of an unused theater, and for baking the individual squares, he rented an industrial oven and kept it running all year at the same temperature. for a change of even three degrees would change the colors.

He worked obsessively, 16 hours a day, seven days a week, and crouching on his scaffold in one came down with what he calls an "Italian kidney colic," the disease that afflicted Michelangelo in his 30s. His dealers in Rome, Paris and Brussels couldn't get Leberb to concentrate on anything but his Four Continents. In the end, the Austrian Ministry of Culture paid rals to be linished, was painted entirely in circles. It shows a Zen Buddhist monk looking inward, a Buddhist monk gazing outward, and a Japanese woman and a child bringing the East full circle. The child's robes were done in cold gold: gold leaf fired three times.

"Europe" came next — and, for his central symbol, Leherb chose Michelangelo's "David," explaining: "Europe is the smallest continent, but has given the most to the whole world, which is Goliath." David is represented three times: first, as a Grecian statue, symbolizing his Mediterranean origins; then Fraternité," which, along with Einstein's theory of relativity. Leherb considers the most important idea Europe has given the world.

Africa - which Leherb sees as "a continent of missing communication" symbolized by an old French phone (from his first Paris atelier) with numbers removed and wires cut - is perhaps the most imaginative, its desert connected by oil pipelines from the pyramids at the top to skeletons of starvation at civilization; skyscrapers and graffiu ("Leherb was here"). But the most innovative color work is bere, too. Leberb had to mix brown. gray, and yellow with three shades of blue just to achieve the conventional Leherb blue.

Writing in the Italian art journal Arte Bolaffi, Professor Mario Vigna of the International Academy of Ceramics at the Musée Ariana in Geneva pronounced Leherb's four walls "the greatest work of majolica painting in this century . . . nereated with unbelievably scrupulous exactitude, perfect even in the tiniest detail, and absolute mastery of vast dimensions: the conquest of

Brandt, Demas Groups Call for Aid Poor to Enhance World Recovery

NEW YORK — Most economists think a recovery has started in the United States and perhaps in the rest of the industrial North. But in the developing countries of the South, depression and the threat of financial ruin persist.

Does disorder in the South threaten recovery in the North? Yes, says the Brandt Commission, a group of prominent citizens drawn from sever-al countries and headed by the former West German Chancellor, Willy brandt, in its new report, "Common Cause," Yes, repeats the Committee for Development Planning of the United Nations, a group of internation-Leconomists headed by William G. Demas, president of the Caribbean Development Bank, in a report released this week under the title "Overoming International Economic Disorder,"

Both groups argue that, if the developed countries do not cooperate with the developing countries, the poor will sink the rich. To rescue the or, the Brandt report calls for these steps:

It also urges additional aid through the World Bank, the International Development Association and the Bank for International Settlements. Would such financial aid to the poor be inflationary? No, the two groups say, not in the present conditions of slack world demand and hauidity shortage. "Taken to its extremes," the Demas report says, "the argument against doing anything for fear of inflation is an argument against economic recovery as such, for it must be hoped that recovery will at least raise commodity prices to more reasonable levels."

But this argument is unlikely to impress the Reagan administration's metarists, who regard pleas for greater money creation to belp the or countries as nothing more than Keynesian inflationism revisited. Demas committee weighed the case for convening a "new Bretton - an international conference on matters of trade, money and te, which it saw as inextricably linked. It did see a case for such a knee hut decided it would be futile without an extensive exploratoew of the main issues, such as the exchange rate system and the on of international liquidity.

the world issues become so complex, the world economic race so huge and congested and the diffusion of power among es so wide that no negotiated solutions to the world's problems rible? frandt and Demas groups consider this a counsel of despair. But aket economists contend that deliberate interventions by govern-p reorder the world economic and monetary systems will do more an good. They argue that the solution to the problems of the poor sult from a "spontaneous" recovery in the North — a cyclical y that they now believe is in the works.

The South's 'Convulsive Contractions'

" champions of the poor recognize that a strong and continuing very in the industrial world is critical to the rescue of the developing tries, and ardently favor one. But they hold that it is too risky to a the vicissitudes of the business cycle in the capitalist countries. sions in the industrial countries, they say, have exposed whole nts to "convulsive contractions."

Fiends of the poor hope that the leaders of the seven major indusantries, meeting in Williamsburg, Virginia, at the end of May, will themselves to the dangers stemming from the third world. But not expect much in the existing political and ideological climate. ink it more likely that the main event at Williamsburg will be a her President Ronald Reagan's efforts to restrict Western trade in If strong European resistance.

Computers, Video Games Facing Off

NEW YORK - It is becoming harder and harder to tell the difference between video games and home computers.

Manufacturers of both kinds of machines are now angling for the same customers, and they have rushed to make their products more alike. Analysts view the competition, which has become more pronounced in the past month, as a broad, somewhat unexpected change in the confusing contour of the home electronics market.

"This has always been a fast-moving industry," said Clive Smith, an analyst with the Yankee Group in Boston. "But things are moving so fast that companies cannot keep up. What is marketed today may well be obsolete in a few months. It is impossible to create a coherent marketing strategy under such conditions."

The competition for the low end of the consumer electronics market has taken two forms. Game manufacturers such as Atari, Mattel and Coleco Industries have begun peddling additional equipment that they say will turn their video games into full-fledged computers. Experts have their doubts, but say the move may lengthen the useful life of the more than 17 million video game units in

Meanwhile, prices for inexpensive computers, such as those by Texas Instruments and Commodore International, are dropping to about what video game consoles cost. For $75 to $200, a consumer can buy a basic computer that will play games — although without some of the advanced graphics available on video game machines - as well as serve some educational functions and figure the family finances.

Computer makers are betting that consumers will sacrifice better game-playing for more serious pursuits. While "home" computers still cannot perform many of the advanced functions of the more expensive "personal computers, sales of the former jumped to 2.2 million units last year, from 385,000 the year before. Analysts expect about five million units to be sold this year.

While hard evidence is scarce, it appears that many computer sales are being made at the expense of video games, which some analysts believe are approaching market saturation. Shipments of video game cartridges dropped dramatically in the first quarter of 1983, to 16.6 million units from 24 million the previous quarter. The health of the video game industry is generally measured in terms of cartridge sales, while the computer industry pays closer attention to hardware sales.

"You are seeing a dramatic transfer to the computer market," said Christopher Kirby, an analyst with Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. "A lot of video game systems are sitting on the shelf in the family room." In an apparent effort to replace video games in the home, Commodore announced Erasing the difference between computers and video games, however, requires overcoming some basic design differences. While both have microchips at their core, video games are designed only to play games. Home com-puters are designed for many purposes. Vi-deo game programs are unalterable; most programs for home computers can be written by the user or purchased and altered.

Thus, many experts say video games are not flexible enough to make effective generalpurpose computers, and vice versa.

Key U.S. Index Rose Strongly During March

United Press International WASHINGTON - The government's index of leading economic U.S. Says Deficit indicators climbed 1.5 percent in March, stronger growth than in February and the seventh increase in a row, the Commerce Department said Friday.

The composite index was beloed most by an increase in raw materials prices, suggesting demand con-tinues to improve as the U.S. economy recovers from recession.

Seven of 11 indicators contributed to the improvement, a unexpect-edly broad-based gain that encouraged economists searching for un-derlying economic strength.

An accompanying index of coin-cident indicators also went up, its

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches WASHINGTON — The U.S. trade deficit widened to $3.63 hillion in March from a deficit of $3.58 billion in Fehruary, the Commerce Department said Friday. In March 1982, the deficit was $2.43 billion.

Last month's performance re-flects a decline in the prices of oil imports and rebounding trade with Mexico. The department said imports increased 24 percent to $2.4 billion while exports also increased - 2.6 percent to $16.8 billion.

The U.S. trade deficit is runn 16.8 percent ahead of the 1982 level, less of an increase than analysts in and out of government predieted. Commerce Secretary Mal-colm Baldrige said Friday that the deficit would total $58 billion in 1983, and not the $60-billion to $70-billion deficit he had initially projected.

His forecast is in keeping with expectations by department trade analysts. David Lund, department trade anaylst, said the deficit may reach only the "high 50s," far short of the department's original forecast of a deficit that could reach $80 billion.

Analysts were particularly en-ouraged by the 0.7-percent March increase in the coincident indicators, which are three series of figures that measure the most basic foundations of the economy.

Industrial production, personal income and overall employment climbed in March.

Although the leading indicators climbed 10 times in the previous 12 months, most of the earlier improvements were unconvincing, based mostly on stock prices or money supply figures.

Caffeine-Free Coke Stimulates Industry

By Thomas J. Lucck New York Times Service

NEW YORK -- Coca-Cola, in a move that promises to heat up the already intense compention in the soft drink business, has announced that it would begin offering caffeine-free varieties of its three leading brands of soda: Coke. Diet Coke and Tab.

The widely expected announcement came Thursday — a year after Seven-Up Co. surred up the industry with a advertising campaign that promoted its biggest-selling drink, 7-Up, as bealthier than colas because it has no caffeine.

Since then, Seven-Up has begun distributing Like a caffeine-free cola. However, Like is not available in half the country. Pepsico. second-leading soft drink maker after Coca-Cola, followed Like with Pepsi-Free, another soda without caffeine that is available in both sugar-sweetened and artificially sweetened varieties. With Coca-Cola's entry into the caffeine-free cols market all three of the largest U.S. soft drink com-panies now offer products aimed at special market segments. Their cusiomers may select soft drinks with sugar and caffeine, sugar without caffeine, no sugar with caffeine, or what now amounts to the most austere of soda pops: B drink containng no sugar and no caffeine.

Brian G. Dyson, the president of Coca-Cola USA, the company's domestic unit, said that colas with-out caffeine now account for 8 per-cent of the total soft drink sales in this country. He estimated that the market would double by the end of

Penney Plans to Buy Bank in Delaware

WILMINGTON. Delaware -J.C. Penney Co., the third largest U.S. retailer, has announced that it will buy First National Bank of Harrington (Delaware).

"We have been studying the fea-sibility of acquiring a bank for over a year," Thomas J. Lyons, execu-tive vice president of J.C. Penney, said Thursday, "The acquisition of the First National Bank of Harrington will give us the flexibility to add banking products and services to the complement of financial serto the complement of financial services currently offered by J.C. They are late in coming, and they may have trouble catching Pepsi." said Joseph J. Doyle, an an-alyst with Smith Barney, Harris Upham. Pepsi-Free is the largestselling caffeine-free cola.

Edward W. Frantel, president of Seven-Up. a subsidiary of Philip Morris, said that "when we opened the no-casseine market, it was just a question of time before others would follow." He added that now there's a long line."

Last year, Americans consumed soda worth a wholesale value of $21.6 billion, according to Mr. Doyle. He estimated that soda consumption would increase 3.5 percent this year.

The addition of Coca-Cola's new caffeine-free products will do little to expand the market, he said. What we will see is a lot of cannibalization, with the three super-powers fighting to grab each oth-ers market share," be said.

Coca-Cola and Pepsico have focused a large part of their public relations efforts on the independent bottling companies that pack and distribute soft drinks under a variety of brand names.

On Thursday Mr. Frantel said that Seven-Up continues to have difficulties convincing bottlers in some areas to distribute its new Like product because of intense competition for the bottlers' ser-

People Express Expects to Begin $149 London-U.S. Flights May 26

LONDON (IHT) - People Express expects to win British government approval in time to begin flights between London and Newark, New Jersey, on May 26. "Everything seems to be on track," Harold Pareti, senior counsel for the Newark-based discount airline, said here Friday. In anticipation of approval, the airline is making arrangements to open a London reserva-tion office and is training pilots for the route, which would be its first outside the United States.

Under the proposal, already approved by U.S. authorities, People Express would offer a one-way fare of $149, less than half the standard fare offered by other scheduled airlines. Under a U.S.-British accord, the airline would be limited to an average of four to five flights a week until April 1985; afterward, People Express said, the limit would not apply.

GAF Chairman Gets Respite

CHARLOTTE, North Carolina (NYT) - Over the objections of a dissident stockholder group, Jesse Werner, the longtime chairman of GAF Corp., has managed to extend to May 13 the voting on a resolution that might oust him.

Instead of tallying the vote at the annual meeting Thursday, Mr. Werner announced that he and the other directors had decided to keep Ready or not, quarterly sales underscore the urgency many makers of video games feel. Warner had a fourth-quarter loss of $18.9 milion, and said its consumer electronics operations — almost solely Atari — lost nearly $45.6 million.

Mattel reported that for the quarter announced that he and the other directors had decided to keep the polls open about two more weeks.

Some analysis and shareholders have attributed GAF's troubles to Mr. Werner, who joined GAF in 1938. He guided GAF through many acquisitions, but sold off many of the companies that GAF had acquired, reducing GAF to two major businesses: building products and chemicals. GAF announced last week that it would liquidate the company by selling the chemicals business to Affied Corp. for $410 million.

Mattel reported that for the quarter announced that he other directors had decided to keep the polls open about two more weeks.

view will lapse ioto a dance of mutual admiration.

One has to concede that out of the various interviews some lively portraits do emerge, particularly of Theodor Geisel, Maurice Sendak and P.L.

Travers. One also has to admit that some amusine unterances get dropped along the way. Theodor Geisel remarks that "The Cat in the Hat' is a revolt against authority, but it's ameliorated by the fact that the Cat cleans everything up at the end.

It's revolutionary in that it goes as far as Kerenski and then stops. It doesn't go quite as far as Lenin." Maurice Sendak observes that what he draws "seems very obviously Freudian, as if coming out of my own analysis." He adds: "People fear that analysis will castrate and dry up artists, but it's just the ysis will east at and thy up artists, but it's just me contrary, in my opinion: it gives wooderful clues and cues as to what you're doing." THE question one finally has to ask is, did Jonathan Cott really have a sound reason for writing "Pipers at the Gales of Dawn: The Wisdom of Children's Literature"?

Certainly he had a reason. As Cott, who is a poet and editor of widely varied interests, recounts in his introduction: in the late 1960s he reached a point where he had overdosed on academia and found himself wandering aimlessly around the streets of London with a bad case of acedia, staring, as if color-hlind, as red traffic lights turned to green, to red. to green.

A friend intervened by giving him a copy of the fury tales of George MacDonald. One story led to another and Cost discovered the restorative powers of children's literature. By and by, he read enough to put himself in touch with his past. So, almost as if to pay a debt, he set about to write this volume. But whether or not this was a sound reason for writing a book is another question entirely. For while "Pipers at the Gates of Dawn" is filled with curiosities, what seems most prominently oo display in its pages is out the authors it treats or any of their books, but rather the phenomenon of Cott's immersion in his subject. It's a little as if he were celebrating his celebration of children's books.

One has to admit that his reading has prepared him well to write a book oo literature. In his 10page Introduction alone, he manages to cite the Gnostics, Carl Jung, Bruno Bettelheim, Herbert Marcuse, Alison Lurie, Elie Wiesel, the Jungian psychologist Marie-Louise von Franz, the critic Helen Vendler, Percy Shelley, Marcel Proust, Jean Cocteau, the psychologist Ernest Schachtel, William Wordsworth, the French philosopher Gaston Bachelard. Arthur Rimbaud. Northrop Frye, the psychologist Mary Alice White, the psychologist How-ard Gardoer, the psychologist Jan H. van den Berg, Stephen Jay Gould, C.S. Lewis and William Blake, not to mention various and suodry authors of children's books. In preparing to write the seven chapters of "Pipers" — which cover Theodor Geisel (Dr. Seuss), Maurice Sendak, William Steig, Astrid Lindgren, Chinua Achebe, P.L. Travers, and Iona and Peter Opic - Cott immersed himself so thoroughly that in some cases he came to know more about their work than his subjects did. In a typical dialogue continues: "Jonathan: Actually, I like it plain." "Peter: How interesting, yes!" lona Opie: You must always ask if you're

"Peter: Yes, that's right. . . ."
"Iooa: . . . because A; we don't think, and B, we just go along with our own habits. But we really are kindred spirits. Jonathan, if you don't mind my complimenting you to your face, which one shouldn't do."

Whether Mrs. Opie is right about that or not, one certainly oughta't 10 quote people complimenting you to your face, especially if the passage in which they do so really makes on other point. But then perhaps it was this sort of encounter that helped Cott recover from his "acedia." In any case, one hopes he feels better now.

Soviet Sports Committee Dismisses Famous Skate and Track Coaches

MOSCOW (AP) — Stanislav Zhuk, the world-famous founder of a renowned school for pairs skaters, and Nikolai Politiko, head coach of the Soviet track and field team for the past eight years, were among three sports officials dismissed by the ruling Sports Committee in a move that stunned sports insiders in Moscow.

· Zhuk, a familiar face at world and Olympic championships for two decades, was accused of violating "moral-ethical norms of behavior" and was blamed for the "deterioration in preparation of athletes" for international competitions, the national newspaper Sovietski Sport disclosed. Politiko and the national team's veteran jumping coach, Vitold Kreyer, were cashiered for "serious shortcomings in leadership and in developing high sports skills," the newspaper said.

Swie: sports journalists said they did not know the specific accusations, and the Sports Committee refused to comment when queried. There was speculation that Thursday's dismissals might be related to the replacement early this year of the Sports Committee chairman, Sergei Pavlov, who had gained a reputation for high living during his 15 years as the czar of Soviet sports.

Czechs Beat Canadians In World Hockey, 5-4

United Press International MUNICH - Bob Gainey of the Montreal Canadiens shot the puck into his own net in the second period late Thursday night to give Czechoslovakia the impetus for a 5-4 victory over Team Canada in the World Ice Hockey Champion-Gainey scored the fifth Czech goal when he put the puck in his own empty net at 13:27 of the second period. Vladimir Rozicka took the shot for the Czechs, and Rick Warnsley made a tough save for shot Wamsley was forced out of his act. The rebound left the net wideopen, and Gainey, checked by another Czech player, was trying to clear the puck when he socidentally slipped it into the Canadian net to make it 5-2.

NEW YORK - Mary Poppins. Hubie Brown conjured up this image of himself after the horrifying loss to the Philadelphia 76ers on Wednesday night. His New York flap. Erving forced shots and Knickerbockers had just lost a 20point lead and a game. Now he had a dunk, which to him is like normal to make sure they didn't lose their mortals missing their mouth with a minds as well We came down on them pretty hard." Brown said when a little of the blood had returned to his face: an hour later. "But we had to do it m a positive vein." Brown needed to find som positive about scoring only nine points in the third quarter Wednes-day, because the playoffs continue Saturday and Sunday at Madison The "we" refers to Brown alone.

His was the raspy voice in the locker room Wednesday night telling the players they had played a "per-fect" first half before committing a third quarter that will live a long time in the annals of dreadfulness "Somebody said I shouldn't be too hard on them, and I said, 'Hey, you haven't heard anything."

Brown said later. "Compared to Mary Poppins. Brown liked the concept of him gliding down from the skies via an open parasol and telling his players that a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down. Back in Atlanagain, more Lou Gossett than Julie Andrews superlatives about him."

Before the Knicks come out Saturday and try to get back in this 3:05 into the game on Mike series, Brown had to find a per-Krushelynski's sixth goal of the spective for the 22-1 fade Wednes-

The linguing question about that slide was whether it could damage the Knicks' attitude in that slide was whether it could damage the Knicks' attitude in for a short-handed goal at 15:33, their own arena this weekend. Williams barreled into the 76ers at ourselves that we could do it to both ends, causing even the normally unflappable Julius Erving to love door opened, their philosoforkful of food. The Knicks had a 63-43 lead early in the third quarter. In Philadelphia, it's not polite to make jokes about the roof falling in, because the roof once did fall in at the Spectrum. But the roof did fall in, figuratively.

Maurice Cheeks and Clint Richardson began durting and dancing into the Knicks' passing lane, caus-ing pandemonium. With Moses Malone now guarding Robinson, that should have given incentive to New York's twin towers. Bill Cartwright and Marvin Webster, to bang their chests and scream for the ball. Instead, Cartwright finished isn't that enough of a crushing event to havint the Knicks Saturday

"This is a seven-game series. We wasted a 20-point lead and granted they didn't have Bobby Jones and Andrew Transactions and Andrew Transactions." Andrew Toney, but we played a good half. It won't be hard to get back on the court. It depends on the attitude of the team. Webster said he had beard the phrase "mental toughness" from the coach a few times. The captain agreed: "I know I didn't go to the boards the way I should have. You have to ask yourself, 'What did I do wrong?' I don't know about the attitude of all the players. "Everybody should look at themselves. I feel we need to get tougher, too. You say to yourself, 'Yon're in a daze.' The crowd is roaring. It gets to be a helpless feel-ing. You're in their arena. We didn't get a call. Everything we tried to do went against us." Brown tried to temper the loss by saying: "I told the players, we've only been together less than a year. We're disappointed, of course, but nobody is running out to get hit by a truck."

Naturally. No sense in runningout to get hit by a truck when you just had an 18-wheeler pass over you in the outside lane, lights flashing and air horn honking.

M English, Issel Ailing

Alex English, the NBA's leading scorer, and center Dan Issel were both doubtful starters for the Denver Nuggets as they prepared to take on the San Antonio Spurs in Game 3 of their Western Confer-ence semilinal Friday night, United Press International reported from Denver. The Spurs lead, two games to one.

English sat out Game 2, and Is-sel left in the fourth period with a knee injury. X-rays showed no structural damage to Issel's knee, but doctors said there was a strained kneecap. English had treatment on his strained left ankle Thursday, but was listed as questionable for the third game.

"If it is at all humanly possible, issel will make it," a spokesman for the Nuggets said. "You get the feeling that Dan is indestructible because he misses so few games."

Answers on Salvador

WASHINGTON — Q: Why are we in El Salvador? A: We are to El Salvador to protect it from Nicaragua. The Sandinist Marxist government of Nicaragua is training Salvadoran rebels to take over the elected government of El Salvador with Cuban and Soviet military equipment.

Q: Why are we in Honduras? A: To train rebels to take over the government of Nicaragus with American equipment.

Q: Then U.S. policy is to defend government of El Salvador. while working for the overthrow of the government in Nicaragua.

A: That is correct. Q: How are we doing! A: Not very good in El Salvador.

But much better in Nicaragua. Q: Would you say it's easier to overthrow a government in Central America than it is to preserve one? A: I think I could say that.

Q: Why? A: As soon as a government takes over in Central America it turns against its own people, becomes corrupt, and commits atrocities against its domestic opponents in order to stay in power. Q: This is true in both El Salvador and Nicaragua? A: It is with this difference, Since we are supporting the present El Salvador government we have to overlook their shortcomings and abuses to protect our own national interests. At the same time we cannot tolerate the shortcomings and ses of Nicaragua since they are being supported by the Commu-

Q: Did the Nicaraguans start getting aid from the Communist countries because we were giving aid to the El Salvadorans? Or did we start supporting the El Salvadorans because the Nicaraguans were getting help from the Com-

Spoon Makes Record

The Associated Press

LONDON - A 1905 silver spoon, designed by the Viennese silversmith Josef Hoffmann and set with semiprecious stones, was sold at Sotheby's auction house for £17,600 (about $27,500), a world record for a spoon. A spokesman for Sotheby's said the spoon sold earlier this year at another London auction house for £180,

A: That's a chicken and egg question. The fact is the U.S. opted to support El Salvador and the Soviets decided to support Nicaragua. Once the sides were chosen it became a whole new ball game.

Q: Central American governments have been overthrowing each other for hundreds of years The people there fail to benefit no matter who takes over. Why should the superpowers get involved?

A: Because in the past, the revolutions were usually between one faction of the military and the other. Whoever took over always pledged good relations with the United States. As long as we could do business with the new government we saw no reason to intervene. But Central American coups detat took a nasty turn once the Cubans got involved. They started training people to support govern-ments who refused to have good reations with us. That's when we had to call in the CLA.

O: How do you keep the Central American government in power A: By supplying the leaders with enough military equipment to make same they can maintain control.

Q: Do you make any effort to improve the lot of the majority of people who are being dumped on? A: You try to persuade the govstrament you're supporting that it's interests to do this. But that's a long-term process and you can't change a country's habits overnight. Until recently the peas-ants accepted it as their lot, Now that the Commics have gotten into the act, the people are reacting negatively to being dumped on.

Q: What's wrong with that? Because, as in the case of the Sandinists in Nicaragua, they came into power promising the people who were dumped on that things would be different under their regime. As soon as they got control they started dumping on the people themselves.

Q: So out choice in Central America is not to stop the dumping, but support the governments dumping on the people who are friendly to us, and destabilize the ones dumping on the people who are in cahoots with Soviet Union. A: Now you've got it. We can't abide a Marxist government in Central America that dumps on its people, but we can live with one

Gypsy Writer

From Auschwitz to Fairy Tales,

Philomena Franz Is an Unusual Author

By Lili Deresiewicz ttonal Herald Tribune

OLOGNE — The small room in the old frame house is filled with antique furniture and faded photographs. But mostly it is filled with the presence of the big, elegant woman who radiates vitality and something like a sense of mission.

Her name is Philomena Franz; her face bears telltale scars of her past. Born in Germany, as were her forebears, she is neither German nor Greek, as ber names might indicate. This soft-spoken woman is a Gypsy — a book-writing Gypsy, a rarity, for the tradition of her people is primari-

She rummages through a stack of papers and picks up a slim manuscript. It is her unfinished autobiography, looking for a pub-sher. She wrote her story, and her recently published book of Gypsy lairy tales, in German. We do not want to write down our language," she declares with unexpected vehemence. "We do not want to share it. It is our own secret language. And it serves sometimes as our only protec-

Once, "before it all happened," she would sing in her mother tongue. Romany, entertaining crowds in German towns and villages. She had seven brothers and sisters, and her mother had eight siblings, all of whom were married and had children; when they were en route, they would wind their way in 20-to-30-wagon caravans to perform tragedies and operettas with life-size marionettes.

"My parents and brothers played various instruments - we Gypsies are all born musicians -I sang and danced, It was a wonderful life, full of joy. The themselves Sinti — members of children went to school in whatever the tribe believed to have migrater town we were."

Hitler came to power and Gypsies were declared "inferior beings." The finishing school Philomena hoped to attend was we were musicians and artists." suddenly taboo, but they could But the Germans were suspicious still travel and perform - until Sept. 1, 1939, when Hitler's troops began to move. Philomena, whose name means

"nightingale," points to the indelible number planted in her skin by the "little men" of Auschwitz. "l look at this as though it were my crown," she says. She was 21 when she was deported in March 1943. She "graduated" from five concentration camps and ran away from the sixth. Her first attempt at escape earned her beatings and four weeks in isolation, existing on water and one piece of bread a l dreamed a wonderful dream in those days. I dreamed I saw a big lawn full of trees laden with huge blooms, and other trees ou which buge ripe apples were swinging. Over the concentration camp sign Arbeit Macht Frei suddenly saw the Madonna, who was beckoning to me across the electric fence, and it fell apart and l was free."

The second escape attempt was more successful: one of the German workers gave her insulated pliers to cut the electric fence. She got out and after wandering for a night in woods and fields, she was found and sheltered by a German farmer. "This too, must be said." she stresses. "There were very lew who behaved like human beings in those days, but they did exist, and often at the risk of their lives." She lost her parents in Mauthausen and three of her brothers in other concentration camps. Her busband, who died seven years ago of an illness contracted in a concentration camp, had lost his first wife and five children in gas chambers, Altogether, 500,000 Gypsies were slain by the Nazis.

Philomena and her family call ed from India to many countries, They arrived in Germany in the early part of the 15th century.

of the unknown, swarthy people who lived outdoors and spoke a strange tongue. In Germanspeaking Europe, 68 edicts persecuting Gypsies were passed between 1701 and 1750.

Philomena's friends today are people from the academic world in Cologne and "all the Gypsies in this area." Not a day goes by, she says, without friends coming to her big house with the huge gar-den where she grows all sorts of flowers and herbs and "without which I could not breathe. We are easy, informal, one big family. When our friends come, they go to the kitchen and belp themselves to anything in the refrigerator. We value the buman far more than the material. Above all we love our children - they are our holy of holies. We let them grow up freely, without restraints. And we get respect from them. A Gypsy family will never send an old mother or father to an old-age home," A young man with a beginning beard enters the room. "My son. He builds organs and plays many instruments." He says he has thought of emigrating to Australia. "We have relatives there who are doing very well. But my mother is not ready to leave yet. And I won't take my wife and child away if mother stays." Philomena be-moans that Gypsies no longer live outdoors, that they are integrated into bourgeois society and live in But Philomena is rarely in her house. She is frequently interviewed on radio and television and she travels throughout Germany to read Gypsy fairy tales on invitation from schools and clubs. But prejudice dies hard. To this day there are signs on camp sites in southern Germany: "Landfahrer [traveling folk] not allowed. The Nazis tried to push us out of the human community. You'll go to hell, you gypsies, they would say to us as they beat us. But I don't want my book to be an accusation," she said of her unpublished antobiography. "I just want the young generation — you can't transplant an old tree — to take upon itself the assignment of making sure that such inhuman horror never comes again. 'Novelist' Sentenced

Richard L. Stratton, who claimed he associated with drug dealers in order to research a novel, was given the maximum jail term of 15 years for his drug-smuggling conviction. Stratton was indicted with 14 others following 2 March 1982 drug raid in Maine in which $1.5 million worth of hashish and marijuana were seized. His defense during the trial was that he associated with top drug dealers to gather information for a novel he was writing about the international drug trade. The authors Norman Mailer and Doris Kearns Goodwin were two of the only three defense witnesses during the three-week trial, which was held in March.

Michael Fagan, the prowler who broke into Queen Elizabeth II's bedroom last summer, was booed off the stage during his singing de-but at a punk rock chib. The audience brought Fagan's performance to an end as he gave his rendition of "God Save the Queen," with lyrics by the Sex Pistols.

Thousands of well-wishers, many of them carrying miniature red-and-white national flags, gathered before the Imperial Palace to catch a glimpse of Emperor Hirohito on his 82d birthday. But one youth hurled a hammer at the emperor and imperial family members on the veranda of the Imperial Palace Police said the hammer fell short of its target and caused no injury. They arrested a 14-year-old youth who was found to have a fruit knife and two dozen pebbles in his pocket. Hirohito, who ascended the Chrysanthemum Throne in 1926, is the world's oldest reigning monarch. He gave four audiences before a total of 53,000 people from behiod a bullet-proof glass screen on the veranda of the Imperial Palace's Chowaden Hall. The government marked the occasion by announcing recipients of decorations of the Order of the Rising Sun and other honors. Dr. Jerome B. Wiesner, 67, a former president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was the only foreigner to receive the First Class Order of the Sacred Treasure decoration.

New York honored Lord Lanrence Olivier for a distinguished acting career with a big apple - in crystal. Olivier, 76, accompanied tal after complaining of stomahy his wife, the actress Joan pains, Plowright, was given the symbol o. the city's "enduring admiration and affection" by Mayor Edward Koch at a gathering of Hollywood stars, politicians and businessmen at the mayor's Gracie Mansion.

An artist who drew the "Sad Sack" cartoons has been awarded $2.58 million by a jury that said a publisher fraudulently misrepresented the value of his work Fred Rhoads, 61, of Tucson, Arizona, was awarded the judgment against Harvey Publications Inc. after a court battle which began it 1977, shortly after the compan'; slopped sending him assignments The suit was dismissed twice of rulings of law, but reinstated by the Arizona Court of Appeals. "Sad Sack" was created during World Wat II by George Baker, but according to testimony. Baker dree only about 800 pages of the car toon. Rhoads took over the ail : work in the mid-1950s and subsequently drew 9,500 pages of the cartoon. He created many of Sa-Sack's company of misfits in Arm uniform, including General, Rockjaw, Captain Softseat, Gabby Gob, Slob Slobinski and record fars HiFi. Rhoads received $35 a page a total of about $330,000.

Former first lady Betty Ford sa women aren't allowed to be a coholic" and "are trapped within that virgin-prostitute dichotomy if she isn't one, she must be the other," Mrs. Ford, who won her battle against alcohol and drug dependency, told Parade magazine. In this country it's almost impossible for a man to confront his wife with the fact she's been drinker Jerry [former President Geral Ford] had no idea about alcoholism, and there was denial on h part.
